Government Receipts Short $2,000,000 First Three Months.

BUTLER'S TILT WITH HILL

Manderson's Amendment to Senate Rules to Determine a Quorum—Almost Denounced Eckels.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—The legislative day of Tuesday last, which was carried over by a recess, fell Wednesday, and again by another recess fell today, was continued in the senate at 10 o'clock this morning. A report from the finance committee was presented and read. It contained a communication from the treasury department in response to a resolution calling for the receipts and expenditures of the government for the first three months of the current fiscal year. The communication shows the deficit for those three months from the estimated receipts to be over $21,000,000, or at the rate of over $67,000,000 for the year. It shows the actual expenses to have been over $60,000,000, or an average of about $20,000,000 a month. The expenses for the year at the same rate would be about $240,000,000 or about $21,000,000 more than the estimated expenses, and would show an increase of expenses over the estimated receipts of a little over $3,000,000. A definite forecast for the whole year was impossible but it was apparent that, should the present conditions continue the deficit at the end of the year would be about $60,000,000. The report was ordered printed.

Comptroller Eckels Denounced.
The discussion of the last two days was then taken up again and Mr. Stensland introduced his senate. His speech was largely in denunciation of the "gold ring" and of the national banks, and he had much to say in rebuke of Comptroller Eckels for his remarks at the Chicago banquet of the bankers' conference. Mr. Eckels, he said, was up to his eyes in a conspiracy to take the country by surprise. He was following in the course of Mr. Comptroller Knox and ex-director of the mint, Leach, who had been made rich by the New York banks. Of course, he said, when Mr. Eckels was in the office of the banker would take him as he had tickled his predecessors.

Mr. Quay gave notice of an amendment to the repeal bill, providing that the act shall take effect January 1, 1904. The senate was then addressed by Mr. Call against any change in the repeal. He was followed by Mr. Butler in condemnation of the positions taken by the senators from New York and Texas. If their propositions were adopted, there would be a change in the senate, if not a change in the ordinary procedure and dignified deportment.

Hill Interposes.
Continuing, Mr. Butler reached a point where Mr. Hill rose and said: "I understand the senator to say that a majority refuses to compromise with a minority the bill ought not to pass." Mr. Butler—And I repeat it.

Mr. Hill—And there I take issue with the senator.
Mr. Butler—I repeat it, and I have no apologies to make for it. Nine-tenths of the measures which become law in this country are the results of compromise.
At the close of Butler's speech, which was delivered with much dramatic effect and to an audience of senators, Mr. Taylor's motion to amend the journal was withdrawn. The journal of Monday was then approved and the repeal bill was laid before the senate.

Mr. Manderson offered an amendment to the rules providing that when on a vote of yeas and nays all yeas shall be counted by roll call.

COMMITTEE CONFERENCE.
Several Senators Call on Carlisle to Submit a Plan.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—Senators Gorman, Baughman, White, Goodrich, Vinton, Gray, Walcott and Blackburn, the committee appointed to wait on Secretary Carlisle and to submit to him proposals looking to a compromise, remained in conference with him at the treasury from 11 o'clock until 4:30. Mr. Gorman was the first to leave. Mr. Carlisle was seen after his emotional visit and he departed with a look on his face that indicated that he had nothing whatever to communicate to the nature of their call or its result. The visiting senatorial ambassadors returned to the capital in stringently ordered, some of them first calling at the senate chambers. Senators Chandler, Baughman and Goodrich called on Secretary Carlisle and had a long conference with him. Mr. Chandler, so far as could be ascertained, nothing definite had been accomplished. Mr. Carlisle, it is said, was very reticent in the original offer taken by him in favor of unconditional release. No compromise was agreed upon tonight but it was intimated that another conference would be held tomorrow morning. The belief exists in the minds of the various committees that the administration will continue a refusal to take effect at a future date and that the senate will be forced to discuss the matter for some time. The report was that the time fixed for January, or at the latest July, 1904, while the silver was held in Mr. Quay's proposed amendment.

The extremists insist that the repeal bill should not be taken until after the close of the administration, the amount of silver purchased being ordered in the meantime to $20,000,000 worth each month. A representative southern silver miner said this morning after the committee returned that they had not seen anything better than what they saw in the senate. The statement had been made, he said, that the administration would have no legislation of this kind but he had seen the committee and they had been very frank in their statements. With the exception of a compromise the administration would not yield. He thought within five days after the passage of this bill, two

GRIPS IN A WRECK

Cars Tangled Up and Badly Damaged.

NO PERSON BADLY INJURED

The Grip Caught in the Cable and Before It Could Be Released Four Trains Collided.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—Twelve grip and street cars were piled up in a heap shortly after ten o'clock today at Fifth avenue and Washington street, and the surprising thing about the accident was that not one of the several scores of passengers, men, women and children, were injured. Never before have the street cars been piled up in such an indiscriminate manner. Beyond a few broken windows in a Division street car, a damaged grip and several platforms and curbs on Fifth avenue, the wreck set out a serious one to the cable company.

It could not have been averted. While slowly ascending the Washington street tunnel grade Gripman William Ward, No. 211, who had charge of grip car 328 and the Division street train, felt his lever rattle in a lively manner. Before he could release the spring and disengage the grip from the cable, the projecting strands of the rope had become firmly wedged in the jaws of the grip and the train was carried rapidly onward. Ward set his brakes and cried out to the passengers that he could not stop the train. Up from the tunnel's entrance the train dashed, directly toward a long line of trains that were slowly winding their way along the congested loop. Another Madison street train was immediately in front of Ward's and the gripman was powerless to prevent a collision.

Get Your Passengers Out.
"My grip is caught. Set your brakes and get your passengers out," cried Ward, and the next instant No. 328 crashed into the rear of the next train, severely battering the platform of the Ogle Avenue car No. 1278. By this time Officer Wilson was stationed at the Francis street corner, realized the situation and he ran alongside of the moving trains to assist the passengers in alighting. A Milwaukee Avenue train that had just stopped, awaiting the signal of the starter to continue around the curve on Fifth avenue, was next caught by the Madison street car that was being pushed along by Gripman Ward's train. This train of three cars was forced to join in the procession. The cars began to creak ominously and as the conductors cried out to the passengers to keep order and leave the cars one by one, a panic seized the occupants. All wanted to leap from the cars at once. Windows were demolished by canes and umbrellas, and the children swarmed out of them like so many gophers from an inundated burrow. Three trains were now in the procession and when they struck the fourth, a Madison street train just around the curve on Fifth avenue, the parallelism of forces derailed several of the cars and piled two almost upon the roofs of some others.

Women Crazed With Fright.
The screams of the imprisoned passengers, together with the sound of the crash, created a great crowd. Officers Nicholas Pullman and Gus Hoffman rushed into the snarl of cars and assisted in drawing the passengers from the cars. Just as the Division street trailer, No. 1500, mounted the roof of the Milwaukee Avenue grip, No. 262, a woman sitting in her arms attempted to jump over the rear gate. Officer Pullman, although fearing that the car would topple over upon him, rushed up, tore the gate from its fastenings and dragged mother and child to a place of safety. The cars continued to twist and turn and with the crash of great bonfire, until the cable became released from the grip of car No. 128. Almost immediately the engineer at the power house at Jefferson and Washington streets stopped the machinery.

The work of getting the cars out of the snarl was over and calls were sent for the repair wagons. A great multitude of people poured out of the surrounding buildings and from all directions attracted by the crash and injured. They were seen to twist and turn. A great many children were found lying on the ground, but no other injured person could be found.

Gripman Ward's Story.
Gripman Ward, after he had assisted in clearing the track, crowd and ordered the grip had become fastened to the cable, probably by reason of a projecting strand at a splice, and I was unable to disengage the grip. A collision with the cars ahead of me could not be averted unless I continued on. I hurriedly arrested the grip. When I saw the train ahead of me standing still I shouted out to the conductor to set the brakes, thinking the shock would release my grip. It didn't, and the result was the cars were derailed at the curve.

FIGHT WITH A MOB

Striking Miners Attacking the Heath Collieries.

CHARGED BY THE POLICE

Four Policemen and Three Miners Badly Wounded. Ten of the Mob Captured and Locked Up.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—Two thousand striking miners attacked the Sutton Heath collieries at St. Helena, county of Lancashire, this afternoon. They drove away the mine officers, broke the machinery at the shaft and split up the wagons. When the police arrived the miners had armed themselves with wheel spokes, stones and pieces of broken machinery. The police charged, clubbing the men right and left. The mob surrounded them, stoned and beat them and finally drove them back, carrying with them three wounded. The police charged twice more before the strikers would yield. They caught ten of the men most conspicuous in leading the mob and locked them up at St. Helena. Four policemen and three miners were wounded severely and several on each received serious injuries.
